COME, STOP YOUR BLUFFING.

Despite The Evening World's liberal offer ir esteemed evening contemporary, with a present and fatnous fondness for bluffing, all maintains this obserful legend at the sed of its cd.torial column:

The Circulation of the EVENING SUN is larger than that of any other evening oper in the United States.

The non-scospiance of our friendly offer, however, leads disinterested observers to the conclusion that the Evening Sun recognizes in is too coy to admit that the circulation of The Evening Worke is at least 25 per cent. greater than its own.

But we will not be mean about this matter. The Evening Sun shall have another chance. The offer is revised as follows:

And, if this generous offer is not accepted with the constitutional limit of ten days, we shall increase the percentage again.

IS JUSTICE TO BE DONE?

mber of instances in which the police to have exceeded their rights and under laws which are supposed to govern them as well as other citizens, have come to light within a few days.

But most conspicuous and glaring among them all is the case of Patrolman PATRICE LAYIN, who is known to have admitted that he clubbed Janitor Prost after he, Proer, was "down." Proer died of his injuries, and Coroner Schultze held an inquest which was a mere farce.

Is justice to be done in this case, and if so, who is to do it?

THE PATRON SAINT OF ERIN. Though born in Great Britain, from which freland has since been so sadly divided by seas and tyrannies, Saint PATRICK gave his name and his fame to the green island which keeps his memory sacred.

WHAT CAME OF IT?

No slarming and unprecedented outburst of crime. violence and rapine has so far followed the opening of an art museum to the public yesterday.

Yesterday was Sunday, too.

The police have not reported that hundreds of mechanics, day-laborers and other thrifty who cannot visit picture galleries aring the week have been so fired by the ary exhibit of cold marble and dry to which they were unexpectedly admitted yesterday, as to rush riotously through the streets and wreck social order, the law and the profits-of millionaires.

But they saw these things yesterday, not in Metropolitan Museum of Art, but in the cay Gallery on Fifth avenue.

What is the latest reason why the Metropoliten Mussum len't opened Sundays?

MUNDANE MATTERS.

New York is not at all disconcerted at the growing rumor that Kansas City is to be the future great city of America. Life in Kansas City is rendered too perilous, by reason of the constant danger of falling over a bluff, for the population ever to become excessively large.

The discovery of a conscience in a Republicar Senator has shocked his entire party. Strong efforts will be made to induce Senator Chace to withhold his resignation. For a Republican office-holder to resign because he didn't believe he was legally elected would be a fearfully compromising precedent!

The Legislature of California adjourned sine die yesterday to see a rattling prize-fight. Two of the Benators backed the pugilists, and it is supposed that when this august body of law makers is reconvened a vote of thanks to the gentlemen of the ring for their instructive and kilful exhibition will be engrossed and spread on the minutes. If the time ever comes when Mr. John L. Sullivan is annoyed at the consequences of his sprees in the East the California Legislature would evidently offer him a future.

WORLDLINGS.

Mrs. John Wanamaker, wife of the Postmas ter-General, has left Nice for Florence and will travel through Italy before returning to Paris. She is expected home late in the Spring.

A correspondent writing from Athena says that a remarkable feature of Atheniati society is the beauty of the women, at least 90 per cent, or the women and young girls seen at the balls being positively pretty.

The handsome man of President Harrison' Cabinet is Gen. Noble, the Secretary of the Interior. He is rather short in stature, but has fine head, with white hair, white mustache and imperial and expressive blue eyes.

One of the most valued treasures of the Key stone Club, of Philadelphia, is an ancient re-ceipt for making punch. It was the result of the labors of a distinguished German scientist, and came into the possession of the Club some years ago.

STILL AT THE PIGS.

Young and Old Striving to Surpass Previous Records.

A Tempting Challenge from a "Champion Puzzle Solver."

The Ladies Try Their Hands With Good Success.

Interest in that razzle-dazzle game of pigtions that from being an innocent and instructive little puzzle, designed to while away a few idle minutes, it has now begome the bone of contention for the claim to that. "Champion Pig - Driver." founded on the surpassing quick records which have been which records several emulative people have striven to surpass.

It was a noteworthy fact that until to-day none of the gentler sex had contributed their records to the general list. Two, however, have broken the silence and submit their records, twenty and thirteen seconds respectively.

One enthusias ic individual, who signs himself " Champion Puzzle Folver of the Sixth seir "Champion Puzzle Eoiver of the Sixth Ward." having made a record of fourteen seconds, comes out boldly sud challenges any one for $50 a side to beat his time.

This may be found interesting to many who claim to have penmed the pigs in time ranging from 5 5-5 to 8 seconds.

Another inventive, genius has discovered that the truly artistic way of manipulating the pigs is to balance the box on the feet, and by a rocking motion persuade them to enter the year.

A Little Boy's Good Record. to the Editor of The Evening World: I have a little boy ten years of age who ha put the pigs in the pen in seven seconds. His name is George Arthur Richards, and I will back him against all comers under fifteen years of age. C. N. KICHARDS.

The Ladies Are Beginning. To the Editor of The Evening World:

I read that no ladies had as yet reported their efforts at pig-driving, so I will lead by reporting to have driven the pigs triumph-antly in the pen in twenty seconds by the watch in the presence of my parents. ADA B. Austin. 237 East Eighty-first s reet.

A Challenge for Ladles. a the Editor of The Evening World :

I challenge any woman in New Jersey t put the pigs in clover as quickly as my wife can : Four pigs in clover, thirteen seconds : seven pigs in clover, five and a half minutes.
If you can find any woman to beat this please trot her out.

A. Coren, Paterson, N. J.

A Record of Mix Seconds.

I penued the pigs in seven seconds from the time I commenced, and since then I can pen them in six seconds. Tell your readers to pen all the 'arge ones first, then get the small one in, at the same time keeping an eye on the pen so the two pigs block the door when they move.

Margi, Dr. Bahan, 566 Seventh avenue.

A New Way of Driving.

The only truly artistic way to drive thos pigs into the pen is to do it with your feet. Place the puzzle on your feet with the door of the pen towards you, resting your heels on the floor, and drive the pigs in by tilting the box back and forth. I did it less night in 2 minutes and 15 seconds. I am a young men, and heretofore my reputation for veracity has been unimpeached. My feet are large and well developed.

Wante to Start a Toursument.

Will you please publish my claim to the ning. I have done this puzzle in 5 5-6 seconds, being timed correctly by the ticks of a watch, and also by a second hand. I have done it a number of times in 7 seconds, and several time in 6 seconds. I am prepared to quer proof of all the above.

As you will probably have a number of quick records sent in to you. I would suggest that The Evenino World get up a tournament to decide the championship by an average time on about five trials.

D. CLABENCE HICKS. 209 West Fourteenth street.

Challenge from a Deubting Thomas. To the Editor of The Evening World:

I do not believe one word of some of these gentlemen claiming to have put the pigs in the pen in eight seconds: it could not be done in one chance out of a hundred. I am speaking of facts. I have tried this puzzle speaking of facts. I have tried this puzzle over sixty times, and the quickest time I have done the puzzle was in fourteen seconds, which is remarkable time. I do not believe there is any man who could do it as quick. Now to show that I mean business. I will challenge say one, no matter who he may be, for $50 a side, man and money to be found if challenge is sent through this paper, at Thomas Maher's, corner Pearl and Centre streets, New York. John A. Carroll, Champion Puzzle Solver of the Sixth Ward.

THOSE IRISH SNAKES.

OUR CORRESPONDENTS STILL TRYING TO SETTLE THE QUEER PROBLEM.

Still Another Experiment.

I hasten to send in my contribution on Irish snakes. I was well acquainted with a young man who had amassed a considerable sum of money at the Kimberly diamond fields, South Africa, and had decided to visit heids, South Africa, and had decided to visit his native land. He brought with him a great many cur os, and among the rest a few enakes. He promised me before leaving to write me often and let me know how his pets fared. He had a monkey and also a few other animals, which he had obtained in Madagascar. They all lined but the snakes, which, he declared on arriving at Dublin en route for Cork, died.

Brooklyn, March 15.

Some Timely Suggestion To the Snake Editor of The Evening World:

I have read with interest the numerous to the absence of anakes in Ireland.

It is an undoubted fact that none exist there in a wild state, and the one which an Englishman claims to have seen was simply an eel. In dry summers I have frequently seen seels in the meadows myself, and it is a well-known fact that when the water in the pond they may inhabit becomes low in cons. If quence of a dry seas in these amphibious flah go in search of other quarters, and are thus often mistaken for snakes by those unfamiliar with their habits and appearance.

Ireland, however, is not the only country that is free from snakes, and I am surprised that pone of the communications received by you make mention of the fact that New Zealand must have received a visit from St. Patrick, as it also is free from these peats. Not a single knake, reptile or animal huriful to man is to be found in New Zealand, although the adjacent is ands are literally alive with them. It is claimed by some that the climate of Ireland is too wet and cold, and that snakes cannot live and increase on that account. This theory will not explain their absence from New Ze. land, as the climate of that country is every hing that could be desired. Is it not a most remarkable and extraordinary fact that these two istands are the only two countries in the world where snakes do not exist? The only wild animal in New Zealand is the pig, descendants of some left there by Capt. Co z. These wild pigs are to be found every shere and are almost as numerous as their tame brethren in Ireland, thus making another cause of similarity between the two countries.

Other speeches were made by J. E. Lowenstein, L. B. Franklin, Joseph Steiner and Nathan L. Hahn.

FIGHTING MAD AT COLLINS, UNDER BROADWAY.

An "Evening World" Reporter Visits the Abandoned Tunnel.

Marks of Time and Decay Everywhere Visible.

When and For What Purpose It Was Originally Built.

Of the thousands of people who daily travel on Broadway, near Warren street, how many are aware that they walk over a tun-

Yet there is a subterranean passage that extends nearly two blocks right under the principal parts of that svenue.

It starts on the lower side of Warren street, and extends about three hundred feet, ending between Murray street and Park place. The tunnel, which was built nearly two decades ago, was constructed for the purpose of experimenting with a pneumatic passenger coach, and after being used three years was An Evening World reporter accompanied by one of The Evening World's artists, visited their underground cavern the other afternoon.

Mr. Seigel, in whose wine cellar the only opening exists, directed one of his workmen to act as escort, and, lighting a lantern, the man led the way down into the dentils of the cellar.

After rolling several barrels out of the way, a heavy from door was exposed to view. It is set in a mussive brick wall and, when opened, creaked on its rusty hinges.

ENTRANCE TO TUNNEL.

As the party entered the tunnel a chilling blast of air fanned their faces. All that remains of the once handsome playform from which the pneumatic car was boarded is a number of old boards.

The tunnel is round, eight feet in height and for the first few yards is built of iron entirely. The roof is supported by heavy iron girders.

After walking twenty feet the party girders.

After walking twenty feet the party reached the tunnel proper. It is much the same as at the eutrance, except that the roof is built of brick and masonry instead of iron. A pair of steel railroad tracks faild about two feet apart, run the full length of the two feet spart, run the full length of the passage.

Contrary to expectations, the air, instead of being dank and laden with gas, was remarkably cool and fresh, and although the pipes of the New York Steam Heating Company are laid about two feet above the tunnel, their presence is not felt.
The lantern in the hands of Thompson, the guide, shed a very unsteady light, and frequently the reporter barely escaped a fall.
After walking a block a faint ray of daylight shone through a manhole, which marked the spot where the passage ended.
As the party drew near the saint outlines of what appeared to be a large box were seen. Upon closer examination, however, it proved to be the car—or what was left of it—that was operated nearly twenty years ago.

THE PNEUMATIC CAR.

It was originally built of heavy ash on an iron frame, and was uphoistered with fine pluch. Formerly there were tancy colored glasses in the windows, and lamps to light the interior of the car.

All has changed; there are no windows in the car, no lamps, and the handsome oak panels that used to ornament the top of the vehicle, have long since fallen to the ground vehicle, have long since fallen to the ground and broken.

The plush on the seats has rotted away, the woodwork on the seats has cracked and the whole car is nothing but a mass of junk, which it is doubtful whether a rag-picker which it is doubtful whether a rag-picker would carry away.

Immediately in front of the car a cross-section of the tunnel begins, which runs in an easterly direction, crossing Broadway and ending in the City Hall Park near the fountain. It is about sixty feet long, and there is a manbole at the terminus, by which a faint glimmer of light enters.

This cross-section is about five feet in diameter and was built for the purpose of allowing the compressed air to escape.

As the party started to return a gust of wind or a sudden jar put out the light, and the trio were plunged into utter darkness.

After considerable fumbling around in pockets two matches were produced.

The first one when scratched broke off at the end.

The first one when scratched broke off at the end.

Considerable caution was used with the second match and the lantern was soon relighted, and soon after the party emerged into daylight again.

The tunnel was built in 1869 by Alfred E. Beach. The work was carried on secretly, and what was being done didn't leak out until the structure was nearly completed.

Oakey Hall, the Mayor of New York, attempted to stop the work by bringing suit against the Company, who held a charter allowing them to put down tracks in New York and Brooklyn for the purpose of transmitting letters, merchandise, &c., by whiches to be run by the pneumatic system.

The case was thrown out of court, the judge holding that the Company had not be right to stop them from experimenting after they had expended such a vast amount of money.

The tunnel was completed and on Feb as they had expended such a vast amount of money.

The funnel was completed, and on Feb. 26, 1870, the first trip was made. An ' underground reception' was given, to which all the Biate and city officials, well known englancers and members of the press were invited.

The tunnel was used until 1885, when the idea of running cars by almospheric force was abandoned, as it was found to be impracticable owing to its great expense.

The tunnel has been closed from that time until this, except for a short time, when, it is said, it was used as a shooting-gallery.

The franchise of the Beach Phenmatic Tube Company was bought in 1820 by the Arante Italipose Company, and is still their property, if there is any awarmship in it at all.

REPORTORIAL REAPINGS.

SOME OF THE DAILY WAPPENINGS IN THE GREAT METROPOLIS.

A Misplaced Earring, for Which Hermann Was Not Responsible. Before a well-garnished table in the Hoffman House café, yesterday, sat the redoubtable Col. Tom Ochikree. His companions were Ed Stokes, William F. Cody, more widely referred to as "Buffalo Bill," and a certain politician known to the boys as "Jake." and chiefly remarkable for his good looks and his connection with the electrical subway. To these boon companions Col. Ochiltree gave the following parration of his experiences at the theatre the night before:

"It was at Niblo's. The house was jummed, and the curtain had just gone up with Herr. marn on the stage. Beside me sat a party of five an o'd couple from the country, their daughter and a buxon lass with red obeeks, and an ea-ort, evidently a city cousin, a well-built young fellow, with black mustache and side whiskers.

As the performance progressed the old couple were filled with won-ferment, and the couple were filled with won-ferment, and the od man declared that what he saw put him in mind of what was told of 'them sorcerers in Holy Writ, b' josh!' The city cousin, with blase air, gave a me wonderful explanations as to how the trisis were performed, but when Harrmann anddenly plunged down into the audience, rushed up to the city cousin, and from his pocket drew forth a gigantic fack-rabelt, city cousin did not attempt to explain how that feat was performed.

At last came the dark stance and out went all the lights. While the house was in darkness, it seemed to me that I heard a number of paculiar little smacks at my side intermingled with a series of silly signles. When, at Herrmann's command, the lights suddenly shot up again, I glanced in the direction from which the strange sounds came, but could see nothing nansual. The country maid and her secori ware both paering very earnestly at the slage.

A whole Buddensiak block must collapse before some people tumble? irrelevably papied dir. Cody.

The Colonel disabined to take any notice of the interruption, and continued his story.

Down lights! shouled Herrmann, and once more we were in total darkness. Bight away those same peculiar little smacks, with the giggling accompaniment, began anew. It was decidedly irritating, and I was fumbling in my pocket for a match with which to investigate these phenomens, when suddenly Herrmann's voice rang through the house;

"Lights up!" "As the performance progressed the old bonse:

"Light's up!"

"In an instant the bouse was in a blaze of light. At the same moment I heard a half-a rifed shriek on my left, and turning I saw the country girl with a very red face and her hand to her ear. She was fumbling around in a vain effort to find her earning, which I at once perceived was missing. The old folks bent over towards the girl.

"What's the matter, Lizzie? Where's yer earring, girl?"

The words had bardly left their lips when they caught sight of something which shope brightly in the young man's black side. Where's Slowly the old lady advanced her thumb and foreinger to this shining object and drew forth—Lizzie's carring.

"When the performance was over and I was leaving the house. I overheard the young man hinting that this was part of the performance, and the Herrman performed a similar feat during the dark scance every night. Lizzie did not say anything, but seemed to be having an awful time with one of the buttons of her glove."

"Do they have a dark scance every night?" queried Mr. Cody.

"They do."

"Goess I must take that in this evening—with a—a—friend," remarked the Hon. William F., reflectively.

The Double-Acting Advantage of Barbers Agrons with Siegves. If there is one thing most excruciatingly trying to a nervous person it is having to sit passive and mctionless in a barber's chair for upward of an hour to have his hair out. And to make the situation more trying, his arms are fettered to his sides by a cleeveless meal-seck tied tightly about the neck.

If it were possible to read it would relieve the intense ledium of the operation greatly. But very few barbers have consideration enough to provide surons with a seves.
